

Stuart Miller -- NOTIS Reunion Bio

I started at NOTIS in 1987 as a documentation writer—shortly before the company moved out of Northwestern University Library. In the group photo sent earlier, I'm the guy in the black and white striped shirt.

I became Documentation Manager, then over over to Sales & Marketing as a communications manager, then to customer services and then back to communications. I am grateful that I had the opportunity for promotion and job choices, giving me experience and skills that gave me flexibility in future job hunts.

I left NOTIS in 1995 following the takeover by Dynix. Not a pleasant time. I joined Endeavor Information Systems as a system analyst and then left in 1996 to work in corporate communications for an IT consulting firm, Whittman-Hart (later marchFirst). It cratered during the first Internet bubble burst and I was laid off in 2001. I then went to work for Frances McNamara, a former NOTIS colleague, in the University of Chicago Library System's Office—where I stayed until I retired in 2016. I've been enjoying retirement ever since, working on my bread-making skills and volunteering as a tour docent at Glessner House and Second Presbyterian Church. I'll be happy to give tours to anyone who's interested!
